@SimFin meets

Normanby Primary School Council

Simon Finch's response:

He has visited over 1000 schools and he thinks Normanby is one of the best at keeping us safe on the internet.

Simon said that Mr Faulkner is a good head teacher who helps his staff to be the best and then all the staff do their best to keep the children safe. He said that we are one of few schools that he has been in where all trusted adults are provided with training and the only school to have the school council team meet and question him. Simon thought that it is great that Normanby Primary has a facebook and twitter account and said we could magpie things from his facebook page. He suggested that we use an Instagram account to make mini videos (not of the children) to promote e- safety messages.

Simon explained that we need to respect each other and ask permission before posting photos. Our parents should also check with us that it is ok to post a photo. We should practise taking photos and choosing which ones are best to post on line. Once a photo has been posted it will be online forever.

Do you think that our school is good at keeping us safe on the internet?

How do you think our school could improve keeping us safe on the internet?

Do you think it is a good idea that we have a facebook page?
